

Play Dates: Facilitating Play, Fun, and Friendship

Play is the foundation to academic learning, behavioral regulation, and social interaction for children. It is important for children to have a solid foundation of age-appropriate interests and play skills to be effective and successful in interacting with peers and building friendships. Friendships are the result of opportunities to interact and share interests and experiences. This workshop will support parents in learning key strategies and skills to build their child's play skills and to structure and facilitate successful play date experiences for their child and peers.
